
CONTENTS

Foreword: Living in a Mayan World, by June Nash	vii
Preface: Perspectives Evolving from and with Mary Lindsay Elmendorf's Work in Maya Communities of Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula	xiii
Acknowledgments	xxi
1. Introduction: An Environmental and Cultural History of Maya Communities in the Yucatan Peninsula	1
E. N. Anderson
Betty B. Faust
John G. Frazier
2. Working with Peoples and Places Through Action: A History of the Participatory Research of Mary Lindsay Elmendorf	31
Alicia Re Cruz
3. The Many Worlds of Mayan Women	39
Mary Lindsay Elmendorf
4. Shifts of Strategies and Focus of the Conservation Efforts of Pronatura on the Yucatan Peninsula: A Personal History	79
Joann M. Andrews

5. Population and Land Use: An Essential Link for Conservation in the Calakmul Biosphere Reserve Jenny Ericson	95
6. Valuing the Maya Forests E. N. Anderson	117
7. The End of Innocence in a Modernizing Maya Community: “There Is No More Timber; Let’s Sell the Land!” Betty B. Faust	131
8. Economic, Political, and Environmental Changes in a Yucatec Maya Village Grace Bascopé	163
9. The Landscape of Santa Rita Komchen: The Role of Metaphor in the Ecological History of a Yucatecan Rural Estate David W. Forrest	175
10. The Transformation of “Paradise”: Deep, Social, and Political Ecology Among the Yucatec Maya of Cobá, Quintana Roo, Mexico—a Dialogical Approach Ellen R. Kintz Amanda S. Ritchie	191
11. Women’s Human Rights Issues Among the Maya Susannah Glusker	205
12. The “Yucatan Syndrome”: Its Relevance to Biological Conservation and Anthropological Activities John G. Frazier	225
13. Conclusion: Reflections on Rights, Resources, and Responsibilities in Participatory Research Mary Lindsay Elmendorf	255
Index	277
About the Contributors	295
Photo essay follows chapter 6.	